

ABSTRACT

In the case four-wheel drive is required, a generator connected to an engine generates electric current, which is supplied to a motor such that a rear wheel shaft can be driven by a driving force transferred through a clutch interposed between the motor and the rear wheel shaft. Accordingly, slippage of the vehicle wheels is prevented and safety of the vehicle is improved.